Commercial and Financial. Money, Bonds, Gold and Stocks.

NEW YORK, August 22, 1870. The Money Market shows the harder ing tendency usual at this season of the year. The western banks are steadily drawing out their balances from the New York banks, in preparation for the moving of the grain crops; and the result has been that the legal tender line has fallen been that the legal tender line has little to $5,000,000, or and the little to $50,000,000, or and the little to $50,000,000 or August 21st, 1869. The export of specie has reduced the specie line to $20,700,000, argainst $21,600,000 at the same date of 1869; while the deposits are $13,500,000 higher than then, and the loans stand $213,000,000 higher. It will thus be seen higher than then, and the loans stand $13,000,000 higher. It will thus be seen that the condition of the banks is less favorable than a year ago. It is, however, to be kept in mind that the Treasury now holds a very large currency balance—

$15,000,000 more than a year ago-which the Secretary, according to his expressed purpose, indends to employ for the relief of the money market, if need requires, by liberal purchases of bonds. It is also to be kept in mind, that preparations are being made for the issue of new currency, under the law of last Congress authorizing an addition of $54,000,000 to the circulation. Although the amount of 3 per cent Certifi-cates retired will nearly equal the new is-sues of bank notes, yet a virtual increase of the circulation will arise from the fact that, in establishing new banks in the South and Southwest, large amounts of greenbacks now absolutely hoarded will be brought into active circulation and that after the banks have commenced operations they will draw into their depo-sits a considerable amount of currency thus at present held entirely out of use. As the new issues of circulation will c mence forthwith, it is reasonable to hope that considerable relief will be thereby af-forded to those sections where it is most

United States Securities at present exhibit a very gratifying firmness. The chief buyers, for some time past, have been the foreign bankers, who appear to have come to the conclusion that, pend ing the war, our bonds are likely to prove a favorite security on the London market. The prospect of increased purchases by the Treasury, for the next two months, and the expectation of a free demand from national bunks to be organized under the bank act of last session of Congress have also a very direct tendency to sustain the market. The uneasiness created by the war at first checked the flow of investment into new railroad bonds; but the interruption has proved to be only temporary. Sound railroad enterprises still command the attention of home in vestors, first on account of the proved safety of such investments, and next from the headquarters of King William were safety of such investments, and not harger reyesterday.
